Diabetes Burnout

>> Diabetes is a self-managed condition <<

Uniquely, people living with self-managed condition’s are making life or death decisions about their care many times a day all on their own, without the direct supervision of a doctor.

The weight of these decisions can take a heavy emotional and psychological toll on people.

So, it’s perfectly normal to feel burnt out or overwhelmed by your disease. ALL people with diabetes feel like that sometimes.

You are not defined by a number- not on a scale, a blood glucose reading, nor an A1C.

Remember, there are 42 factors that affect your blood glucose. These range from the obvious, such as food and exercise; and also influences such as hormones, medication interactions, scar tissue & how much sleep you get. [Brown, Adam. Bright Spots & Land Mines.]

Nobody & nothing is perfect 100% of the time. That goes for your diabetes as well. Shoot for progress, not perfection!
